

BOGGS WOULD RESIGN TO HELP GOOD ROADS

Says Representative Meyers In Advocating Road Bond Bill Before the House

Representative Jim Park, of Madison, voted to put the road bond bill on the calendar of the House Wednesday.

A vote for the bond issue is a vote for a "greater Kentucky," Harry J. Meyers, of Covington, told the House when he began his ten-minute speech in favor of allowing the bill a first reading. "Here's a bill not for any county," he said, "it is for the entire state."

"Some people will say it gives too much power to the present administration. Well, let it get its first reading, then when it reaches its third reading you can amend it. Make it imperative until 1923 and that no bonds can be sold until 1924. Then it will not elect a democratic governor and administration the republicans should leave their chance."

Mr. Meyers made a plea for the school children of the state, saying the children of Kentucky need roads to get to school. "They cannot get there in the mud."

Speaking of changes that the State Highway Commission had not properly administered the road law, Mr. Meyers said he was authorized to tender the governor the resignation of Green Garrett, chairman of the Highway Commission, and Joe S. Boggs, State Highway Engineer, if that would pass the road bond issue bill.

Mr. Meyers said that "the greatest sum the state ever will owe under the bond issue bill, if it passes, will be sixteen millions dollars."

In closing he said that Kentucky's motto was: "United we stand, divided we fall," and that it should be placed on a concrete base. "If you've got no place to stand, you've got to fall. We are in the mud."

Frank L. Strange, of Bowling Green, chairman of the committee in charge of the bill defended the majority report. He declared there had always been open consideration of the bill. He declared the bill would put a mortgage on the entire state.

He asserted that the committee believed the revenue the backers of the bond issue were counting on to pay off the issue would be consumed by the costs to be such as could be legally used for the purpose. He charged that the persons who appeared before the committee for the bill were interested in selling materials and contracting.

Mr. Strange declared that the Highway Commission had not carried out the highway law in the proper spirit. Nobody can point to any roads of consequence that this commission has built.

"I am thinking of the people back home. I have never had any word from the people of Warren county in favor of this bill."

"The people of the state do not want this drive."

Mr. Strange called on G. L. Drury to explain what he said was a decision of the Court of Appeals that the automobile tax could be legally used for repair. Reading section 5 of the bill allowing a tax, Mr. Drury said that it was a move to "trick the farmers."

He declared that if the bill passed court action would be taken to keep automobile license fees from being used for paying it off and that a tax then would be necessary.

WANTS MORE TAX TO PAY THE BONUS

Washington, Feb. 2.—Secretary Mellon today told the House Ways and Means committee the soldier bonus should be paid out of special taxes, such as increase of first and second class postage and tobacco taxes. While not recommending them, he estimated $300,000,000 could be derived from a cent first class postage increase, 50c thousand and one cigarettes, two cents on each bank check, 50c per horse power on automobiles, increased documentary stamp taxes and increased second class postage to wipe out the deficits in that branch of the service. He said the bonus would cost $425,000,000 annually for the first two years.

NORMAL SCHOOL BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

Will Become Real Teachers' Colleges If Governor Signs It—Bonus Bill Reported

(By Associated Press)
Frankfort, Feb. 2.—The $10,000,000 soldier bonus bill was reported today by the committee on appropriations without expression of opinion and was given its first reading in the house.

Representative Chandler's bill forbidding teaching in the state schools of evolution as related to the origin of man, was favorably reported by the committee.

The transit officer law was repealed Wednesday after a stormy debate, in which the present educational laws were assailed. The bill was that of Representative A. O. Denton and completely abolishes the office without giving counties the right to select them if they wish. It was this feature which brought opposition from Representatives G. C. Waggoner, L. J. Jeter and R. D. McMurtry, who branded the measure reactionary. Mr. Denton, W. M. Boling, Arch Quarles and several others declared the office useless one. The bill also gives lower courts jurisdiction over truancy cases. It was passed by a vote of 53 to 35.

Concurrence in a Senate resolution will mean an investigation of the Automobile Tax Commission, Confederate Pension, Fish and Game and Agricultural Departments by a committee of seven legislators to determine what saving might be effected by consolidation or abolition of the offices.

Bills passed by the House Wednesday include Senator Hiram Brock's measure to permit the normal schools to give degrees; one to require fiscal courts to pay county judges' salaries monthly instead of quarterly, and another providing for the holding of mine foremen's conventions at Madisonville, Lexington, Pineville and Paintsville, instead of Lexington only.

The age-of-consent bill was recommittees. The Senate Committee on Education decided to report favorably Mr. Bright's bill to create a state board of education composed of eight members and the state superintendent of public instruction. The measure is in line with recommendations made by the Kentucky Educational Survey Commission.

SAPIRO TALKS TO FARM CONFERENCE

Marketing Expert Tells Convention At Lexington of Trends of Agriculture

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 2.—The vital trouble with agriculture today is an ancient and unintelligent system of dumping products which can be remedied only by discarding the old methods and adopting the same principles of merchandising that all other industries have followed for more than two generations. Aaron Sapiro, California marketing expert, told those attending the tenth annual Farm and Home Convention at the College of Agriculture in Lexington here last night.

Farmers of the country have placed primary attention on production, believing it was their function to spend time, money and labor in growing products, and that somehow, then means which they could not understand or control, the products would be carried from the point of production to the point of consumption where they would be marketed and the proceeds rolled back to the farmers in accordance with the high-sounding phrase "supply and demand," Mr. Sapiro said.

"This attitude did not materially affect conditions in the old days, but as production and consumption separated and middle steps were injected into the process, all industries, except farm production, became organized with the result that the farmer has come to represent the only disorganized industry in the United States although this is the most important one," the speaker pointed out.

"Under such a system of dumping the farmer breaks the price against the farmer and the price which he is to reap the profits of such a blind system, console the farmer by telling him that he is the victim of supply and demand. They forget to tell him that supply and demand both have flexible points and the wise merchant is the one who discovers this flexibility," continued the speaker.

"Intelligent farmers are now learning to do the same," Mr. Sapiro pointed out in showing the trend of marketing methods. Farmers have learned to organize on a non-profit basis, without speculation of any kind and as a result are really merchandising their products instead of dumping them," he said.

"This is the most important development in farming for many years," he declared. "The old habit of putting labor and attention on everything except marketing and then losing the value of everything by a defect in marketing has passed."

"In solving his marketing problems, the farmer also is solving the problem of quality production as well as those connected with the human and cultural phases of the farm," he concluded.

COCHRAN MODIFIES PHONE INJUNCTION

And Tells Attorneys Character of Service Will Be Considered In Rate Hearing

A decided modification of the temporary injunction granted by Judge A. M. J. Cochran, of the federal court in the city's suit against the Cumberland Telephone and Telegraph Company to force return to pre-war rates and tolls was reported by City Attorney H. C. Rice and County Attorney J. P. Chennault, when they returned from Lexington where they had appeared before Judge Cochran with the city's answer to the suit this week.

They say that Judge Cochran said that he had not seen the order of injunction as drawn up, and when certain portions of it, objected to by the city were read to him he ordered them stricken out. He said he had no intention of enjoining the city or any citizen from taking any grievance they might have, to a state court, or other legal action. He declared that he had granted the injunction merely to restrain the city and council from enforcing a return to pre-war rates until he had a hearing of the case in full.

Judge Cochran declared that he would certainly consider, as moved in the city's answer, the character of service rendered by the telephone company, in considering the matter of rates. An argument of the city's attorneys was that the phone company transacts its business within the city limits of Richmond at a large profit, whereas that portion of its business done outside the city limits in the county is done at a loss, and it is this phase of the situation which the city attorneys contend should be considered by the courts in ascertaining a fair and reasonable rate for the company's patrons in the city.

M'ADOO SAYS U. S. SAVED R. R. MONEY

Washington, Feb. 2.—Taking into consideration every expenditure by shippers, travellers, or by congressional appropriation, the railroad system of the United States only cost the American public an average of $470,637,401 per month, for all the war-time period when the government ran it, William G. McAdoo, first director general of the administration, testified today before a senate investigation committee.

He said it was costing under private control now an average of $525,412,135 per month. "In other words, the cost of private operations, since federal control, has been 30 per cent higher than under the railroad administration," Mr. McAdoo said in conclusion.

PROSPECTS BRIGHTER FOR BEEF CATTLE

The Weather Fair tonight and Friday; colder tonight.

(City Associated Press)
Lexington, Ky., Feb. 2.—With stocker and feeder cattle back to a low point and surplus stock of meat disposed of, the future should hold more promise for the farmer who feeds beef cattle for the market, Wayland Rhoads, extension specialist in beef cattle production from the College of Agriculture, told Kentucky farmers at the tenth annual Farm and Home Convention here today in discussing the cattle situation with them.

"Owing to the fact that he has had an almost continually declining market for his product, the past two years have been difficult ones for the cattle feeder," Mr. Rhoads said. "The man who has made money has been the exception especially during the past year. In most cases those who made profit were farmers who had their cattle contracted for or else fed them for a quick finish and early return to themarket."

In the discussion of results obtained by farmers who co-operated with the college extension division in conducting demonstrations on their feeding operations, figures were produced showing that 10 out of 30 demonstrations in Western Kentucky suffered a loss of $33.92 on each steer that they fed during the past year.

Eleven other demonstrations in the same section of the state realized a profit of $11.93 from each steer that they fed, according to the figures.

Out of 12 co-operators in the blue grass, five made an average profit of $42.07 on each steer that they fed while seven other demonstrators lost $26.23 a head, according to the figures given.

Those who made a profit were farmers who had their cattle contracted for, according to Mr. Rhoads.

Greater use of grass lands, which are common in Kentucky, was recommended as one means whereby farmers could reduce the costs of finishing cattle both in the late and early summer. During the coming season supplementary grain feeds were recommended in cases where the grass was tender.

DR. TINDER TALKS TO FARM CONFERENCE

(City Associated Press)
Lexington, Ky., Feb. 2.—The greatest problem confronting the country minister today is the problem of his fitness, adaptability, and efficiency, the Rev. F. A. Tinder, pastor of the New Christian church, of North Middletown, told Kentucky farmers and their wives in speaking to them here today at the tenth annual Farm and Home Convention being held at the College of Agriculture.

Rev. Tinder appeared on the church day program of the rural life conference being held in connection with the convention and spoke on the subject, "The Problems of the Country Minister."

He outlined the second problem of the rural minister as that of giving God a place in the affairs of the industry and the third as the people themselves. "The minister, therefore, should know his people not only by name but also by their temperament, their ability and their religious and social life, whether they are rich or poor," Rev. Tinder said.

"There is no more complex problem than this," he added. He declared that the fourth problem of the country minister was in getting people to adopt true, wise and practical methods in their everyday life.

BASE BALL FANS TO MEET AT PARIS

Question of Revival of Blue Grass League To Be Taken Up At That Time

Several Richmond base ball fans are planning to go to Paris Friday evening to attend a meeting, at which will be discussed revival of the old Blue Grass league this spring.

Jess Morton, manager of the Lexington Reos of the past season, has written fans in the blue grass town to have representative there. Robert Martin rejected a letter and will take over an auto load of fans from here. It has been suggested that fans who think a league team in Richmond could be made a success the coming season, make their presence felt at this time so that those who are willing to help or organize it, may know what they have to count on.

A number of fans believe that Richmond could put a real base ball team in the field the coming season. Quite a lot of talent was developed by the Church League last year and there are others who would be willing to go into the game in the event that Richmond became a member of the Blue Grass league again.

GOVERNMENT MONEY READY FOR POOLERS

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 2.—That every detail of the proposed loan of $10,000,000 from the War Finance Corporation to the Turley Tobacco Growers' Cooperative Association has been arranged that the money will be ready for growers when they comply with certain regulations, was the statement of Aaron Sapiro, general counsel of the turley association, who returned from Washington.

"The money from the War Finance Corporation will be forthcoming when it is called for," said Mr. Sapiro.

Brush W. Allen, of Harrodsburg, vice president and member of the executive committee, who went to Washington to aid in the negotiations with the War Finance Corporation, was in Lexington, and said that Mercer county growers were highly pleased with the new system of handling the tobacco and were optimistic in regard to the outlook.

Lexington warehouse manager estimated the amount of turley leaf under the control of the association on the floors of the Lexington houses at 4,200,000 pounds. Warehousemen said that in most cases the average advance payments could be close to $10 the hundred pounds.

It also was said that while there was much good tobacco, the amount of good turley was a great deal larger than had been predicted.

Rebryne plant under contract are working night and day to take care of the turley that are being ordered to give place to other crops to be delivered.

The Road Bond Issue

A lot of people in the state are opposed to the proposed big road bond issue because they are afraid of an increase in taxes in some way. Now here in Madison County we know Joe Boggs, State Highway Engineer, A. H. Boggs, is one of us and we know that when he says a thing, that it's so. We know, also, that he is thoroughly competent in every way to give the state an efficient, honest and reliable administration of its Road Department, and that he is doing it. So when Joe Boggs tells us that the best way to get road bonds in Kentucky is to vote the big road bond issue, we believe him.

tucky is to vote the big road bond issue, we are mighty apt to believe it. And when Joe Boggs tells us that those bonds can be voted and carried and paid off without one cent increase in taxes on the taxpayers of Kentucky, we know that he knows what he's talking about.

The safe issue that's before the legislature, however, isn't of issuing the bonds, but of allowing the people of Kentucky an opportunity to vote on the question. No matter how much some of the members at Frankfort may be opposed to the issue of road bonds or any bonds, they should be willing for the people at home to finally decide the matter. But the only way the people at home can do so is for the legislature to submit the question to a vote. The people are entitled to this vote. Any big question in fact, nearly every question of public importance should be submitted to a vote of the people for their approval or rejection, as they see fit. This is real democratic government. And the member of the legislature at Frankfort who singly sits in his seat and arrogates to himself the right to finally decide all questions without permitting the people back home to have a say about it, is going to find that he isn't as popular as he thinks he is, when he gets back on the stump and starts to talk again.

It isn't a question of whether the members of the legislature at Frankfort favor the road bonds, or not. They should permit the people to make the final decision on the bonds at the polls.

DAUGHERTY WATCHES COAL MINERS' PLANS

(By Associated Press.)
Washington, Feb. 2.—Plans of the government to cope with any situation which might arise from a strike of coal miners when the present agreement expires at the end of next month, are being worked out by the Department of Justice, it was indicated today by Attorney General Daugherty.

He said he is closely watching the situation as it developed, as well as the proposed junction of the railroad workers with the united mine workers to resist wage decreases, but said he is not yet ready to make known the government's policy.

SEVEN KILLED IN MINE EXPLOSION

(By Associated Press.)
Lanes, Penn., Feb. 2.—Seven men were killed and 22 others entombed a mile and a half from the mouth of the H. C. Frick Coke Company coal mine here today as the result of an explosion. Trained rescue crews are trying to reach them.

The seven dead first reported scalded to nine when that number of bodies was brought to the surface at noon. At the same time the list of those entombed decreased to 20. Meanwhile experienced miners are working feverishly to reach them, but it is believed the chance is slight that they are alive, owing to the presence of gas.

EXPERTS ON POTATO GIVE GOOD ADVICE

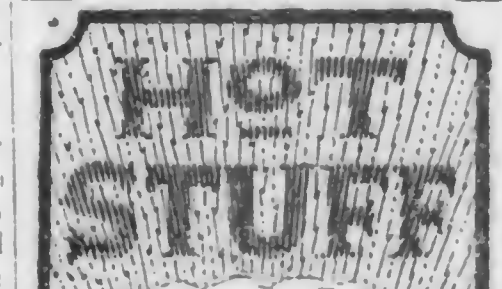

(By Associated Press.)
Lexington, Ky., Feb. 2.—The Colorado potato beetle, the potato aphid, and the potato leaf hopper are the four insect pests largely responsible for a reduction of 100,000,000 bushels in the annual potato crop of the United States, H. H. Fox, Jr., entomologist at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, told Kentucky potato growers in speaking before them here this afternoon at the tenth annual Farm and Home convention.

The specialist outlined methods of control to the farmers and told them how they might reduce the losses from these pests in their own fields.

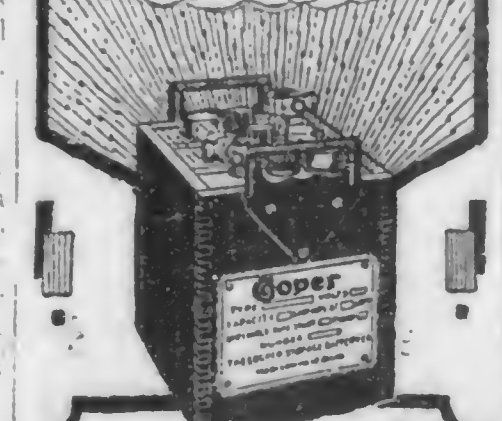

Valleau Says Mosaic Hurts Spuds
Potato mosaic is the most serious disease that potato growers of America have to contend with, W. F. Valleau, plant pathologist at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, told Kentucky farmers at the tenth annual Farm and Home convention here today.

Losses from the disease in Kentucky range from two or three per cent of the crop in cases where a resistant variety is used to nearly complete loss where no attempt is made to control the disease. Small potatoes, which are commercial purposes are particularly susceptible.

The disease is similar in nature to the mosaic of tobacco and results from the transmission of a virus by a discoloration of the leaves. A common cause of the disease is the use of infected seed. Such an outbreak from a reliable source can be controlled by the farmer.
